Overview of Alan's Case

Attorney Alan Phillips was sent to jail (<https://ohioamf.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/04/Wake-County-Sheriffs-Office-Inmate-Detail.pdf>) on Monday, April 29, 2019 for contempt of court for refusing to provide the North Carolina State Bar confidential client files. With no evidence of wrongdoing, and completely ignoring the sanctity of attorney-client privilege, the Bar secured a court order for his client records. Who knows what the motivations of the NC State Bar might be, but one thing is clear, this fishing expedition is unethical and requires an independent review of the NC State Bar.

After Attorney Phillips refused to reveal his privileged client records, the judge found Attorney Phillips in contempt of court and sent him to jail, telling him he'd remain there for 48hrs. Attorney Phillips was told that, once released, he'd have ten days to comply with the court order, or he'd face additional jail time.

Talking Points for Media and Legislators

- Attorney Alan Phillips is currently in jail for protecting his client's privacy during a NC State Bar fishing expedition.
- With no evidence of any wrongdoing, the NC State Bar is demanding that Attorney Alan Phillips reveal years of client records.

- NC State Bar has ignored at least three complaints that Attorney Alan Phillips has submitted against Bar attorneys for their conduct and a number of other complaints that organizations nationwide have submitted regarding the same.
- Attorney Alan Phillips is not the only attorney who has recently faced disbarment by the NC State Bar under unethical circumstances.
- If they'd like further information, ask them if you can email them additional background information on this case, If so, here's the latest press release from Attorney Alan Phillips.
